Tuareg Wars (1962 -)

Mali-Azawad

The nomadic Tuareg in the north of Mali maintained a long-standing revolt against a government traditionally dominated by southern politicians shortly after Mali became independent from France in 1960. The uprisings focused in and around the Azawad region, north of Timbuktu. After several outbreaks of violence during the 1980s, violence peaked with the 1990 outbreak of the Tuareg Rebellion. Following an initial defeat by the Malian Armed Forces, reparations by the government of Alpha Konare included the creation of the self-governing Kidal region. Violence in 1994 died down following peace between moderates on both sides in 1995 and a negotiated peace agreement. Violence continued due to a lack of integration by combatants, but it was not until 2011 that the situation again escalated in the aftermath of the Arab Spring and the disintegration of Libya, which resulted in a heavy inflow of small arms, and the increased involvement by Algeria. In January 2012, the National Movement for the Liberation of Azawad (MNLA) together with several other groups took full control of the region. Disputes on how to handle the situation led to a military coup against President Touré in March 2012 that, in turn, resulted in further turmoil. The MNLA declared the independence of Azawad, but soon lost control of most of the territory to radical Islamist militias including Ansar Dine. A French intervention in January 2013 paved the way for a UN mission, which was established in April of that year. In June 2015 multiple declarations culminated in a final agreement between several Azawad-affiliated groups, including MNLA, and the government of Mali to end hostilities. However, inadequate implementation of the agreement results in continual armed confrontations between pro-government militias, Azawad-affiliated groups, dissidents of Azawad-affiliated groups, ethnically oriented groups, and increasingly since 2017, radical Islamist militias.

Niger-Air-Azawad

In 1990 the nomadic Tuareg in northern Niger explicitly sought greater political autonomy following decades of grievances on local political exclusion. With the first armed group Air and Azawad Liberation Front (FLAA) to be established in 1991, fighting between 1990 to 1995 took place largely in the Air Mountains. A short-lived truce was agreed in 1994 between the Niger Government and the Tuareg umbrella organisation Coordination of Armed Resistance (CRA), later called Organisation of Armed Resistance (ORA). Another accord was signed in April 1995 in Ouagadougou with various other Tuareg groups and some Toubou, the last signing in 1998. After ten years of relative peace, Movement of Nigeriens for Justice (MNJ) reinvigorated conflicts in 2007 following little follow up by the Nigerien government on the signed peace agreements.

Description	Affirms and slightly revises the first agreement, establishing a new ceasefire, and a joint peace committee. Deals with security logistics such as ceasefire monitoring, and future decommissioning (which is to be tied government economic development). Agreement provides for: an amnesty for some ORA and State defence members for acts in the conflict; a day of national reconciliation dedicated to victims; reintegration of ORA civil servants and students into state institutions. Agreement also deals with armed forces (integrating ORA into special new units); and decentralised social and economic development. A time line is provided. Sissela: This is an agreement between Niger and ORA, and was mediated by Algeria, Burkina Faso and France. It lays down the principles directing the process of finding and preserving peace, consolidating national unity and developing socio-economically. It covers the territorial and administrative organisation of Niger, the details of restoration of peace and national reconciliation incl. a ceasefire once the agreement is signed, the establishment of a special committee for peace composed by both parties and mediation (details on number and head and vice head of committee, meeting schedule, and mission - tasks), a general amnesty, a commemorative day of national reconciliation, reinsertion of demobilised ORA into public function, and schools and universities. It also includes a chapter on the organisation of the defence and security forces, also incl. reinsertion of former ORA members, local personnel – they will all receive the appropriate formation. There is a chapter on social, economic and cultural development, incl. provisions for displaced people, insertion and work programmes for conflict particularly affected by the conflict, investments, special provisions for rural areas, health, education, culture, transport/ infrastructure, public administration incl. decentralisation etc. There is a list of agreements to be signed from this onwards.

Page 1, SECTION I – GUIDING PRINCIPLES, Clause 1:

The present Agreement - the stipulations of which are irreversible - solemnly encourages the Government of the Republic of Niger and the Organisation of Armed Resistance (ORA) to bring back peace in a global and permanent way to the territory of the Republic.

Page 2, SECTION II – TERRITORIAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE ORGANISATION, Clause 6:

The creating and the limits of the “Collectivités territoriales” (Regions, Departments, Municipalities) and those of the Arrondissements are settled by the law on proposal of the special committee where the representatives of the CRA will be members.

Page 3, SECTION III – RESTORATION OF PEACE AND NATIONAL RECONCILIATION, Clause 12:

With a view to the establishment of permanent security, of the restoration and consolidation of peace, the two Parties decide to create and to establish in Niamey, within two weeks following the signing of this present Agreement, a Special Peace Committee composed of the two Parties, with both sides equally represented, and of the mediation. The total number of members of this group cannot exceed 20, whereof 14 for the two Parties.

The Presidency of the Special Peace Committee will be entrusted to the High Commissioner at the Restoration of Peace and the Vice-presidency will be entrusted to a representative of the ORA. Necessary means for the activity of the Committee will be taken care of by the State.

The Committee will meet periodically. It could also be convened by its President on demand of one or the other of the Parties. At the meetings of the Committee, minutes will be taken.

The Committee will have as its mission:

- 1/ to supervise the application of the Agreement and the timetable established by it.
- 2/ to ensure that the stipulations of the Agreement are widely spread and that there is a campaign of explanation of it among the Nigerien population.
- 3/ to supervise the execution of the disarmament operations and the recuperation of all arms, munitions and war material.
- 4/ to determine the number of people before starting the integration work.

Therefore, it will receive for example:

- the list of demobilised elements of the ORA of which it will make a detailed calculation,
- the list of arms, munitions and war material to be handed in and of which it will control the recuperation and the stocking and for which it will decide the destination.

The Special Peace Committee will have under its authority a Group of military observers for the composition of which it will mainly appeal to the mediating countries.

During its mandate the Group of military observers will have the following tasks:

- to control the application of the cease-fire and to report its possible violations.
- to control, within the framework of the present Agreement, the recuperation, the handing in and the stocking of arms.

The functions of this Group will be defined by a document which will have to be decided upon before the arrival of the observers and which will specify the forms of its use.

Its mission will last for a period of three months, renewable if necessary.

The Group, whose Post of Command will be in Niamey will have at its disposal branches in the regions affected by the conflict.
