2.5 The new preamble to the amended Constitution of Bougainville provides as follows:

"The Bougainville Transitional Government is established as a transitional arrangement to restore the civil authority of the people of Bougainville under the Organic Law on Provincial Government. Apart from running the affairs of the Bougainville Transitional Government, it will be responsible for negotiating a political settlement with the National Government. It is not intended that this body become the ultimate form of government for the province. Under the "Charter of Migraine for a New Bougainville" signed on the 25 November 1994, Bougainville leaders of the National Government agreed that after a political settlement is reached between the National Government and the Bougainville Transitional Government the Assembly of the Transitional Government shall act as a Constituent Assembly to review the Constitution of the North Solomon Provincial Government and enact a new Constitution. The Bougainville Transitional Government will be committed to this task. The leaders also committed themselves to a "new spirit" and to "a new deal for a new Bougainville". The Bougainville Transitional Government and the National Government will be committed to working out a new deal for Bougainville which, the leaders of both governments agree, must address the basic grievances of the people and of there province, politically, socially and economically.

For this reason, BTG believes that it ought to be seen as a peacemaker and a peace-builder, working primarily in the management of the conflict through peace-building effrots and confidence-building foundations. It ought not to be seen, strictly speaking, as an enforcer of the law. That is not to say that it cannot assert its authority as a civilian legal authority on the ground. On the contrary it is bound to do so. It will continued to condemn violence and killings in any form and do everything within its power and influence to prevent these. But it believes that its success as a transitional arrangement or as a vehicle for bringing the people to a political settlement requires that it be firm but fair. 2.6 In addition to the specific aims of BTG as are provided under these instruments, BTG has an obligation as a government to respect, if not follow, the policies of the National Government, both past and present, in so far as those policies relate to its efforts for peace on Bougainville. In this regard all past agreements or understandings between the National Government and Bougainville leaders are binding on BTG, to the extent they are relevant. These agreements have provided the context from which a number of fundamental policies have emerged, and from which various stands (not always similar) have been taken by leaders of Bougainville and leaders at the national level auto what the national policy was, or ought to have been, in relation to Bougainville.
